

Rain

The capricious rain poured on the windowpanes of the Cambell homestead.

The little boy screamed with fear of the serene, glistening drops of rain.

The rain may swallow him in, with no certainty.

The indecisive and obstinate boy began to let himself in the rain. Years passed. A man with burdens in his life was stuck in his sublime childhood days. He strolled home in the rain and toppled.

He lay like a stone. What an end to a life where he always tried to please everyone, including the rain.