

Lost At Sea

by Charlotte Frisoli

You're stranded here in the deep blue sea,
As you're scared and lonely in the dark.
The creatures swim below you, fast and free,
As you try to hide in the depths near the sharks.

The sun creeps behind the clouds,
Left you are in the dark, of the deep blue sea.
You're cold and lonely with no one around,
Frightened you are, I can guarantee.

The sun rises, as the sky turns bright,
You see a boat pass by, in the deep blue sea.
You yell and holler despite your plight,
But they sail away, unable to be free.

You drift for days, in the deep blue sea,
Cold with fear, and too paralyzed to swim.
At last, you close your eyes in 1...2...3,

Your body becomes stiff, and your soul goes grim.
